Good morning, all!

Fibi UAT continues today, to conclude this week, on June 15th.

Today is "LOAD Test Day," so we are hoping as many of you as possible can log into Fibi at 10:00am.

Please attempt to log in with your JHED ID and polus123 as your password prior to the 10:00am session. If you are unable to log in, send us an email and we'll set up your account and roles.

Below are some pointers to make participation easier:

- Group sessions are scheduled and shown on the ORIS Calendar, join them from the link provided there on each session day or click this ZOOM link. It is NOT mandatory to participate in group session testing; test whenever you can.

     This week, group sessions begin at 10:00 am.

- Information on logging in, how to test and how to report is on the UAT page at the ORIS site.

     Click this FIBI link to go straight to the login page.

- We do ask specifically that you participate in the "LOAD TEST"; try to log into Fibi at least once at 10:00 am. We want to measure the performance of the system when taxed by many users: will it work, will it slow. will it crash?

- We encourage and hope you will try to test some every day; any amount of time devoted to working in the system is appreciated.

If we find bugs or other problems, POLUS will be actively working to remedy them as we go along. That is why it will be helpful to continue testing as much as you can through the two-week period.

This is a critical part of a successful launch of Fibi – and will ultimately help to determine a go-live date. Your participation in this round of UAT is very much appreciated; we hope you enjoy working in the new system!

Best regards,

ORIS
